That is wearing our very souls away, And grant to our goaded hearts a hush That is holy enough to let them hear The footsteps of angels drawing near, We mean to do it. Oh, never doubt, When the burden of daytime droil is o'er, We'll sit and muse, while the stars come out,

As the patriarch sat at the open door Of his tent, with a heavenward gazing eye,

To watch for the angels passing by. We see them afar at high noontide, When fiercely the world's hot flashings beat Yet never have bidden them turn aside, And tarry a while in converse sweet;

Nor prayed them to hallow the cheer we To drink of our wine and break our bread.

We promised our hearts that when the stress Of the life-work reaches the longed-for close, We'll loosen our thoughts to such repose

As banishes care's disturbing din. And then-we'll call the angels in. The day that we dreamed of comes at length; When tired of every mocking quest,

And broken in spirit and shorn of strength, We drop, indeed, at the door of rest, And wait and watch as the day wanes on-But the angels we meant to call are gone! . . . . EDITORS CLARION:

AGRICULTURAL.

SUGAR FROM INDIAN CORN The secretary of the English legation reace & Co., Bankers, 57 Exchange Place, N. Y. at Washington, Mr. Victor Drummond, made from maize or Indian corn and from sorghum. Speaking statistically, he says that sorghum will yield 1,000 pounds of sugar from each cultivated acre, and maize about one-fifth less. But even from maize sugar, a Maine farmer, who made the experiment, reported a profit from ane acre equal to that from thirty acres of wheat. If the discovery proves equal to these statements, which are made on respectable authority, its importance is considerable. Sugar cane and beet-root are now the principal sources of the sugar of commerce. But sugar-cane requires a special soil and climate, and the cultivation of the sugar-beet is a nice and difficult matter. But maize and sorghum will grow nearly exerywhere in the United States, except, perhaps in Alaska, and their growth is so vigorous as to need scarcely any skill to raise them. The announcement will come very agreeably to those western farmers who now sometimes find corn a clear full and sometimes to offerd a fair cheap fuel, and seems to afford a fair prospect that this country will soon rank as highly as a producer and exporter of sugar as it now does of wheat. Intrinsically there is nothing improbable in the statements. Maize and corn have always been known to contain sugar, so long as they have been known at all, but the percentage was so small that no known process would extract it profitably. And that the sugar should be of fine quality seems likely when it is considered that the difference in the apparent sweetness of sugar from beets, used on the continent of Europe, and that from sugar-cane, used in England and the United States, is entirely due to the fashion of the countries, continental Europe demanding a fine grained sugar, and England and the United States a cross-grained loaf. Indeed, the refiners of Paris

boil from the same raw beet sugar a fine grained product for home consumption, and a coarse grained product for the En-

The Successful Farmers. Working farmers are the successful ones now. There is no calling or business or profession but that calls for work as well as watching. The merchant, the physician, the lawyer, every man must take an interest in his own business, and farmers are no exception. Leaving farms to an overseer or drivers has "played." No man will go on the farm and have the work as well done as the owner himself. His eyes should supervise everything-the feeding and watching of stock; the taking care of tools and machinery; the sharpening of plows, repairing of fences, in fact, all matters pertaining to the farm, must be looked after by him. His profits are regulated by the closeness with which he watches details, takes interest in them and pays attention to them.

Now, at the beginning of the season all farm implements should be put in proper condition for work; plows should be made sharp, harness, single trees, gates, fences, in fact everything should be put in order. If all this has been attended to and and there is no plowing or other farm work on land, clean up your yard and lot, burn up all old, useless worn wooden tools and put away the iron. If corn has not been planted, prepare the land as soon as possible, and select your seed. Watch everything closely, read what is going on all over the country, as well as the columns devoted to your interest, and learn from the experience of others, as well as from yourself how to be prudent and prosperous.

Plant Plenty of Squashes.

There is scarcely a greater luxury of the garden than early squashes. When your last year's potatoes have become bitter, and are sprouting, and the new ones are small and few in the hill, a dish of tender and juicy white bush squashes, is both lucious and wholesome. Besides, what is good for the farmer is good for the mechanic and shop-keeper, and their families, and all you can raise, more than you need for home consumption, you can readily sell, and thus pay for your sugar, tea and coffee, The Rural New Yorker thus tells how to cultivate the squash:

The squash plant is very tender, and should be among the last vegetables dec18,'78-1y. planted. It will do well on any good garden soil, but a sandy loam is best adapted to supply its wants.

The early varieties are planted in hills, three or four feet apart each way; while those that run, or spread over more ground, require intervals of seven or eight feet. Pulverize the soil thoroughly by the plow or spade, and prepare the hills by incorporating two or three shovelfulls of well rotted stable or barnremove all but the three strongest. The seeds may be planted two or three weeks earlier than usual, by giving the young plants some protection. For this purpose lay a box, ten or twelve inches square, on the prepared hill; heap the hole thus formed, and cover it with a The amount of its Capital Stock paid up is ... pane of glass, which may be removed would otherwise be advisable, by adopt- as follows:

The Molasses or Syrup

Obtained from Sorghum cane, notwithstanding our inferior machinery for extracting the juice and boiling the syrup, is in my estimation one of the best paying crops the farmer can raise. We have several varieties of cane, most of which I have tried, and much prefer the crooked-top, or goose-neck, as it is sometimes called. I made the past year 120 gallons of excellent syrup from one acre. Let no man, black or white, who cultivates the earth for a living, fail to plant a sorghum cropthis year if Louisiana cane cannot be obtained. Plant any time in the next six weeks.
